OCTOBER 10TH 1984 saw the launch of Oxfam's major national campaign Hungry for Change. It is a campaign about food and hunger, and about the world food system which is obviously failing the millions of people who go hungry.

Now in its second year, the Hungry for Change Campaign has been a remarkable success. Thousands of people throughout the UK and Ireland have joined, setting up over 250 Hungry for Change groups throughout the country, and in November 1985, about half a million people were involved in the Hungry for Change Second National Fast.

Hungry for Change is not only a growing movement: it is now a growing influence. Our politicians and decision makers are beginning to listen, and take action. Over the last months, we have seen:

- The UK Government taking a lead in calling for a substantial EEC emergency food aid programme and in pressing for speed in implementation.
- The EEC responding to pressure to establish a 500,000 tonne contingency reserve of extra food for emergency relief in its 1986 budget.
- The UK Government pledging £3 million for development aid to Ethiopian famine victims.
- The UK Aid Budget increased by £17 million next year, and £30 million the year after.

Hungry for Change is a campaign which believes in the power of ordinary people in the rich developed countries to help change the world food system.
